Garfield's Film, March 12, 2013 - Garfield: A Tail of Two Kitties, also known as Garfield 2, is the 2006 sequel to the live-action feature film Garfield: The Movie. That movie was. Garfield is back and this time Garfield and fellow canine Odie follow their owner, Jon Arbuckle, to England, the UK can never recover, as Garfield is mistaken for a similar gift cat who has inherited a castle. Garfield savors the royal treatment offered by his faithful four-legged subjects, but his reign is in danger! Stubborn villain Lord Dargis is determined to remove Garfield, so he can turn the castle into a resort. Garfield's greatest, best and perfect world soon flips into this tale of two kittens. First of all, I'm owned by a cat, so I naturally enjoy anything that has to do with cats. Garfield: A Tale of Two Kitties is a happy, funny and silly film. It's much more fun than Garfield's first film. I think this is mainly because of Billy Connolly, who is hysterical as the bad guy in the film, Garfield ends up in London, and switches with a cat that looks like him, and who is a prince and has a vast estate. Billy Connolly's character wants the estate, and he wants to get rid of the cat. Silly spongy comedy then follows. I really enjoyed it. He's lightweight, funny and happy. Cisco Asa 5505 Key Generator plus. Yes, it's made for kids. But I think any animal lover would also enjoy this movie. You just have to go see it knowing it's pure flite, and you're going to have fun. I don't watch much television, because if you spend all your time on the couch you could become the cat equivalent of a couch potato, which would be one of those cushions with the crochet message: If you can't say anything good about someone, sit right here with me. I kneaded and snouted Pillows so many times I even know the author of the quote: Alice Roosevelt Longworth, who based on this pillow must have certainly been a cat lover. But I confess I saw 'Ebert & Roeper' on TV when they reviewed my first film, film, two years ago. I was eager to get my first review. Having spent years inside the narrow panels of a comic strip of newspaper, I glorified in the freedom of cinema. It allowed me to show off my body language: My woody stretches, my elegant pirouettes, my daring leaps and bounds, my shameless affection for my owner, Jon (). There will be malcontents who claim that I am not the real author of this review, because how could a cat know that after mentioning a character in a film, the actor's name is included in parentheses? Do these people think a cat lives in a vacuum? I've read all the reviews of the film, especially those of Ebert, a funny and witty prose stylist with deep erudition, whose reviews are worth reading only for themselves, whether or not I have any intention of watching the film. I have to read movie reviews because Jon watches DVD all the time and likes to have me within pet distance, and I need advanced warning about movies he'll want to avoid, so I can go through a snooze under the couch. Last night, for example, he saw 'Cat People' -- which, judging by the soundtrack, had no cats on it. But I digress. Ebert, the smart and handsome, gave thumbs up to my first film, but Roeper, the other, gave thumbs down and was particularly unpleasant. un kind.
